THAT GOLD BRICK.

The Old, Old Swindle for Once a Dead Failure.

Chief Skinner Captures the "Docu ment" Itself.

But the Swindlers Escape Blunder

Skinner and a rew qt nis right-hand inch, have been camping on the trail of the hardest set of toughs and crooks that ever struck this town. There is a gang of 30 or 40 of them, in all lines of crookedness. A struck this town. There is a gang of 30 or 40 of them, in all lines of crookedness. A sudden snap of official work last evening broke into their camp, and demoralized them badly if it did not break them up. The police had the satisfaction of accomplishing one of the rarest feats of police work—the capture of the "working machinery" for the notorious gold-brick swindle.

A week ago yesterday a good-natured, easy-going young man of about 26, hailing from the Shenandosh Valley in Virginia, arrived in this city. His name is C. B.

from the Shenandoah Valley in Virginia, arrived in this city. His name is C. B. Hewitt. He knows a good deal more about some of the sharp tricks of swindlers than he did seven days ago.

He strolled into a faro game last Friday evening, and there got acquainted with a sport calling himself White. After a milk-punch together, White proposed a visit to the ostriches at Washington Gardens, and the new-made friends went out. It was between 4 and 5 p.m. While there they were accosted by an apparent idiot, who offered $100 if they would find his girl for him. White proposed to work the fellow and get his money. The "fool" walked away, and dropped something, which White picked up. It was like one of the leathern sling-shots used by boys, and is called by crooks "the pigeon." White undid it and took out a cent, which he put in his pocket. He then rolled the sling up and called to the "fool" that he had dropped something. The "fool" was delighted. He said there was a cent in it that his mother gave him before she died. He wouldn't take $1000 for it White said "there's no cent there, it dropped out." "Bet you $500 it sin't," said White. Both pulled out big rolls of greenbacks, but White hadn't enough, and called on Mr. Hewitt for money, wanting him to go halves. Hewitt refused, but pulled out his money—$295. White took it and said: "Well, lend me some for a minute," at the same time counting it over. Hewitt tried to snatch it back but White threw it upon the ground with the sling. The "fool" scooped up the whole business and jumped the fence. Hewitt overtook him, but then three pals of the crooks came up, prétending to be detectives, and detained hewitt while the "fool" slipped away a few rods to a hongy in which he awas interactive.

which could be bought for half tis value. He proposed that Hewitt "go halves" with him and buy it. He would go and pay the man $50 to bind the bargain. He didn't know what it could be bought for. Hewitt led him on, and said he could get all the money he wanted in a day or two. Dutchy spent Sunday looking up about the gold.

Before this, however, there had been an other scheme worked on Hewitt. Saturday Dutchy had remarked that he knew a better way to make money than his gold proposition of the night before. It was to buy out "Indian Tom," the long-haired, evil-looking fakir who has been selling tapeworm medicines here on the streets for some time. Tom was making mints of money, but was tired of the business, and would probably sell his, "rights" for the whole West for $5000 or $10,000. Hewitt pretended to nibble at this bait and Dutchy steered him up against Indian Tom, who appears to be in league with the big organized gang of confidence thieves. Hewitt was astonished to recognize, in the tapeworm man's partner a ventriloquist, the "fool" who had robbed him of $206 the day before. He pretended not to know him, however. The tapeworm field and some of his cappers "worked" Hewitt in a very adroit way—too long to be described here -but falled to sell him the business achief Skinner told him to "lay for" the man with the big chunk of gold. Chief Skinners and Officer Lemon arrested Indian Tom and the ventriloquist, his partner, yesterday, and locked the precious pair up. Well, on Sunday, Dutchy "investigated" the gold business. Monday, after dinner, he met Hewitt, who had meantime been carefully sounded by cappers of the swindlers, to see if he would "blab." Monday afternoon, Dutchy brought to Hewitt "the man who had the gold," who called himself Johnson. He said he was hard up and had to raise some money for a friend in trouble. He had a big brick of gold, which he artfully insinuated he had stolen, and would selit it for half what it was worth it well to be a blood hard word to see the gold. He with said he had so with the brick.

The precautions taken by the gang to test Hewitt, lest he be trapping them, were extraordinary; and it is to the credit of the rather green young man that he fooled them so well. Monday evening he was approached by another capper of the gang, who had become acquainted with him, and proposed a new scheme. He was to go and "do" an old man out of $500. Hewitt was to wait at the corner of the Downey block. He was to get the money, walk rapidly up the street, put the coin in Hewitt's hands and be himself ready to defy suspicion when overtaken. Hewitt agreed, and waited haif an hour in Monday evening's fearful rain. Then the capper returned and said the man was drunk, and couldn't be "worked" till next day. Then Dutchy came along and took Hewitt aside, proposing to make arrangements for leaving for New Orleans as soon as they should get the brick. They agreed as to the train they would take. Then the other capper returned, full of hope of working the old man for $500 next day.

On Tuesday Hewitt saw none of the gang till after dinner. Then he began to look around, and soon met the capper at the Nadeau. The capper said they could do their job that evening sure, and would get $1000 instead of $500; and to fix some preliminaries got Hewitt to wait two hours in the bilitard-room of the Nadeau. All this was to see if Hewitt could be depended upon. Then the capper "found" they couldn't work the game for a day or two, and tred in most adroit fashion to get Hewitt to say he was going to New Orleans next day. He said he himself was going to El Paso. Would see Hewitt when he got back, and employ him. He said he frequently netted $4000 a week, and didn't have to invest any capital. All *Hewitt would have to do would be to follow his instructions. Hewitt didn't blab his plans, however. If he had done so, this story would have stopped here. His reticence, however, assured the capper that he was "all right," and hadn't mentioned the gold-brick game to any one.

Tuesday night Dutchy and Hewitt were inseparable. Dut wouldn't take $1000 for it. White said "there's no cent there, it dropped out," "Bet you $500 it's there," said the "fool," "Bet you $500 it's there," said the "fool," and made Hewitt carry the brick upstairs to rooms. Both pulled out big rolls of greenbacks, but White hand't enough, and called on the White hand't enough, and called on the some for a minute," at the same time counting it over. Hewitt ired to snatch it back, but White threw it upon the ground with the sting. The "fool's scooped in the whole business and jumped the fence. Hewitt came up town and posted Chief Skinner and Officers Dan Lynch and Frank Lemon on the robbery: and by their advice a "laid low" for the robbers. He went around again to the faro game. The dealer and the gang all knew about the robbery-for the rannel long. They commiserated with him, however. It is understood that it was on account of this robbery that the faro games closed down last Saturday night, the gang all knew about the robbery, on which he was fully posted, and asked if Hewitt got a man't had a big chunk of gold which could be bought for half its value. He expected that he might be knocked on the head at any moment, and kept one hand on his revolver, while the other clutched a roll of bilis with a crisp fifty on the outside. Finally Dutchy sallied out to get his money. He did not return for some minutes, and Hewitt rushed out, too, ostensibly to find him, but really to hunt for the police. He saw spotters of the gang at every corner. The infamous coterie is so well organized that it had a cordon of its members in every direction for many blocks. Hewitt finally found Dutchy, who "had got his money." Dutchy told him to hurry to the room, and he would be down in a minute; and Hewitt started on. Just then Officers Lynch and Lemon, in citizens' clothes, came running down Requena and Los Angeles streets. The spotters of the gang recognized Lynch and passed the alarm along like buckets at a fire. On Los Angeles street one of them tried to trip Lynch, crying, "Stop him! He's a thief! I saw him steal it!" Lemon was close behind, and he gave the thug a fearful blow on the jaw that sent him floundering in the street. Lynch, Lemon, the Chief and Hewitt rushed up into the Arlington, and into Room 3. Johnson, warned by his pals, had fied like a deer, unable to carry off the heavy brick, which was lying there in the sachel. Scarcely had the officers entered the room when the whole building seemed alive with toughs—the members of the gang who had flocked in from every quarter. They were in savage mood, and few at Hewitt like a pack of worke ver done by a crook, and its loss will be a blow to the swindlers, who will have had been on the ground in time to catch both scoundrels in the room had it not been that they were delayed by a mistake made in telephoning from the bank. There is little hope of a catching them now. At 11 last night, Andy burns, who is undoubtedly one of the gang and who looks very much like Johnson, was arrested by the Chief, Lynch and Lemon, and locked up.

HABEAS CORPUS.

The "Sacred Law" Lets Two People
Ont of Limbo.

Judge Brunson heard two habeas corpus cases yesterday afternoon. The first was the case of Toy Yuk, a Chinese girl of about fourteen summers, who had been taken from a house of prostitution on Negro alley, and, upon arraignment before Justice
Austin, had been held under the provisions of an act to project children from abuse and of an act to protect children from abuse and crime. Application was made to the justice to release the girl on ball, but this was reto release the girl on bail, but this was refused, and hence the habeas corpus. In ruling upon the case, Judge Brunson fully recognized the bearing of the statute in question, but he said he saw no reason why the girl should not be admitted to bail, and he ordered her release on the filing of a bond of $250, approved by the clerk. The bond was speedlly filed, and Yuk left the courtroom with three grim-visaged Celestials of the male persuasion, and, presumably, was driven back to her former haunts.
Yuk is a very good looking damsel, as which the blush of maidenhood has not departed, and eyes cut artistically bias.

Hing Ship, the keeper of the den where the girl was found, is held under a charge of abduction. It is said that he brought his ward from San Francisco about three months ago, and that he paid $600 for her.

The second habeas corpus case was that of C. H. Chapman, ornamentally known as "Texas Kid" or "Kansas Kid." He is described in a circular, sent out for his apprehension, as "smooth face, good looking, appearance of an oplum fiend, age 25 or 30, height 5 feet 6 inches, diamond ring on third finger of right or left hand; quick with his gun." A reward of $50 for his apprehension was offered by Richard Nash, constable at Reno, Nev. He is charged with burglarizing O'Neill & Howard's saloon at Reno and making off with over $200.

Judge Brunson, In ruling upon the application, said that it was the business of the officers to exercise due diligence in filing a complaint against an offender. It had been too much a practice among Los Angeles officers to put a man in jail and wait for something to turn up to show his guilt. In the present case, two full working days had transpired since the arrest of the prisoner, and still there was nothing to show why he should be held.

Deputy District Attorney Denis, who had been called in to appear for the county, said the case had but just been called to his notice. He sat down at the long table in front of the judge's stand and began vigorously to write out a complaint.

Meanwhile the Court ordered the prisoner, and still there was nothing to show why he should be held.

Dr. Stainburn will be absent in the East about a month.

"A HUSTLER."

Mary Schooley and Her Matrimonial Tangles. A curious case was again stirred up yes-terday by the filing of a document with the County Clerk-one William Schwalm attaching property in East Los Angeles which Mary E. Scholley, or School is interested. Schwalm avers that which many E. Schooley, or Schooley, is interested. Schwalm avers that he lent the festive Mary $500 in various sums last year, and now he wants satisfaction. Mrs. Scholley is "a hustler." It is related that she was divorced June 21, 1886, from Ellis L. Scholley, on the ground of his abandonment; that September 11, 1886, she was married (as Mary E. Emsley) to John C. Bell, the auctioneer; that October 26, 1886, she was divorced from him, and he afterwards attached the same property which Schwalm now seeks. Mary then went to San Diego, to the arms of a still prior lover, and it is supposed that she is there still. Some weeks ago The Times republished a short article from a San Diego paper, which recounted a bloodless shooting affair in which auctioneer Bell, Mary and her present lovyer figured. Mary is evidently a good news-maker, as well as a speedy and unconventional match-maker, and further developments may reasonably be expected.

The Charity Ball.
The Charity Ball of the Ladies' Benevo-lent Society will take place as advertised, this evening. The grand march will begin at 8:30 o'clock. On account of the state of the 8:30 o'clock. On account of the state of the streets, etc., the managers desired to postpone the ball, but are unable to secure both hall and music at any available, reasonably later date. The funds of the society, which is a non-sectarian one, are almost exhausted, and a long postponement would prevent many deserving poor people from being aided at this inclement season. If any of the patrons of the society are unable to participate in the pleasures of the ball, their contributions will be gratefully remembered. Those who are able and have not yet contributed are earnestly requested to do so to the extent of the price of a ball ticket, $3, at least.

THE TRIAL OF ANDREW SNY DER'S BLAYER BEGUN.

The Story of a Drunken Killing at the Cape Horn Saloon Last October-The State's Damaging Evidence Against Him.

The trial of George Dietrich for mur der began yesterday morning before Judge Cheney and a jury of the following gentlemen: L. Pulaski, P. C. Peterson, M. P. Groove, John Condra J. H. Birch, Charles Helmer, C. H. Humphreys, Charles A. Young, L. C, Mason, A. Valla, J. N. Moore, H. D.

The information recites that the defendant did willfully, unlawfully, maliciously, feloniously and with malice aforethought kill one Andrew Snyder on the 22d day of October, 1886, in der on the 22d day of October, 1886, in the Cape Horn saloon of this city.

The Judge, after having the information read, announced the case was in the hands of the people. District Attorney Patton then explained to the jury the diagram of the scene of the alleged crime, with the circumstances and facts the State would attempt to prove, and which will appear in the testimony for the State.

Peter Mueller sworn, testified: As to his name and residence, is a baker by trade, but now owns a saloon, and owned the Cape Horn saloon last October. Knew Andrew Snyder; he was his brother-in-law. Snyder died October 22, 1886, in the house of the witness.

Was present at the saloon on the evening of the 11th of October, 1886. Dietrich came into the place nearly every night. On the night in question they played four games of euchre, and then Dietrich showed a big American dollar which, he said, had four "M's" on it. One of the boys put the dollar in his pocket. Witness shook dice with the defendant at 9 o'clock and went to bed across the street, from where he bed across the street, from where he could see into the saloon. He went to bed and soon heard a big noise and looking out saw Dietrich standing in front of the bar throwing up his hands, calling Snyder all manner of names, half in German and half in English. Witness went down and seeing Dietrich Witness went down and seeing Dietrich asked him if he was crazy again, and pushed him out the door. Dietrich stood there threatening and defying Sayder until the latter said he would go out to him—if he did get a black eye. Sayder then went out and they got together and struggled this way and that way. Witness saw Dietrich have a knife and then Sayder hollered, "The dog has got a knife," and soon came into the saloon and said he was stabbed. They took him and found him cut in six or seven places, and the bowels coming out of

It was a bright moonlight night.
Welsh and Quinn were in front of the saloon when he went in. Dietrich was lying in the street where Snyder had left him, and lay till the policeman took him.

Cross-examination: Dietrich came to the saloon between 7 and 8 o'clock. Was in a pleasant mood. All three parties were on good terms. Dietrich had drank one whisky and some beer. Thought there was no trouble when witness left the saloon, but there had been some words. When witness re turned Sayder started out for Dietrich. He saw Snyder have no clubor revolver. turned Snyder started out for Dietrich. He saw Snyder have no club or revolver. They were about twenty feet from the door when they commenced to struggle. Saw Dietrich strike Snyder. Went out to see what the two were doing, when Snyder called, "He's got a big knife." Witness started to go to them, but Snyder came against him and said, "I believe I'm stabbed." Did not see anything in Dietrich's hand. Quinn and Welsh stayed in the saloon. Did not see Dietrich any more. Did not say he didn't care if he did have a fuss in his saloon, because he had a bartender who would lay them out with a club. Witness knew Dietrich a year and a half. Martin Welsh sworn: Lives in this city; is a bartender. Remembered the occurrence at the Horn saloon, October 11th. Went into the Horn saloon with a friend to take a drink at 9 or 10 clales. Snyder had a club behind the bar and came out before the bar two or three times and witness persuaded him to go back. Snyder pulled a revolver two or three times on Dietrich and witness persuaded him to put it up. Mueller came in, and had some words in German, then Mueller pushed Dietrich out the door. Dietrich in German called barkeeper a male descendant of a female dog. Snyder went out after defendant, who was 150 feet away. Witness heard Snyder say Dietrich had a knife, and coming back to the saloon, said, "I am stabbed," and pulling up his shirt, showed a cut in the abdomen from which the bowels were hanging, and then went back to the backroom. Saw Snyder have no weapon when he went out. No one else about but Mueller while struggle was going on. Dietrich was laying on the ground as if he was hurt, after Snyder came of the court.

Cross-examination: Snyder and Dietrich were not quarreling, till Dietrich spit in the whisky. Did not hear Snyder call Dietrich a hard name. They came together about fifty yards out. Did not see them striking each other. Did not think there would be trouble. The defendant would run outside of the door when Snyder came around the bar with a club. Defendant did not spit in Snyder's whisky by accident. Mr. Mueller came in and asked the barkeeper what was the trouble. Snyder told him, and Mueller put Dietrich out. I enlarged the opening, returned the bowels, sewed up the place and put him to bed. He did well for five or six days, but when his bowels began to move he began to fail. The explanation is that the constipated condition of the bowels kept the liquid contents from entering the abdominal cavity. At the post-mortem examination we found, what I had suspected, a perforation in the bowels from which had issued purient matter and filled the entire cavity. There were several cuts, evidently from a knife.

Mexican Robbers, Not Indians.

(El Paso Times, Feb. 13.]

A United States Army officer has just returned from Sonora, Mexico, after thoroughly investigating the alleged Indian outrages which were reported to have been committed a short time ago. The officer, with a hunting party, including several Indian scouts, happened to be in the vicinity of Oputo at the time the report was received. He immediately proceeded to the spot where the attack was made, and put the Indian scouts on the trail, which was carefully followed. They soon discovered that they were not pursuing Indians, but a band of Mexican robbers, as some of their clothes were found secreted near, where the attack was made. The Mexican authorities continued the chase after the robbers, Until within a few weeks of her elevation to the throne her life was spent in comparative retirement, varied only by tours through the United Kingdom. Queen Victoria succeeded her uncle, William IV, June 20, 1837, as Victoria I, and her coronation was celebrated in Westminster Abbey June 28, 1838. She was married February 10, 1840, to his late Royal Highness, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg Goths, by whom she had issue: Victoria Adelaide Mary Louisa, born November 21, 1840; married January 25, 1838. Her Majesty is the pattern of a woman in all the relations of life. Her mother died March 16, 1861, followed by the sudden death of the Prince Consort December 14th. On succeeding to the throne, the Queen found the Whig and Conservative parties nearly bulanced in the House of Commons. Lord Melbourne and his colleagues continued to hold office until September, 1841, when, owing to their unpopularity, arising from their want of financial ability, they were obliged to give place to the late Sir Robert Peel. It was not, and is not, the purpose of this paper to take any new ground on that subject, in principle The article in last Monday's issue pointed out the tendency of the times in this particular; it treated of it as a fact, without aiming to advocate a general social or religious revolution in this regard. As to the matter of issuing this paper on days that involve Sunday counterbalance the evil, and go part way, at least, towards taking the The Lesson of the Storm

It is not our purpose to make apologies for the condition of the climate, although at the present it is not at its best. We appear to be having a condensation of our semi-tropic winter in heavy storms, chilly winds, mud, with floods in gutters, streets and stheams. All of these disagreeable features have been crowded into the past few days, much to the disgust of many newcomers, as well as older residents. comers, as well as older residents. Some who have been here for weeks enjoying the unparalleled beauty of our rainless skies and the soft and balmy atmosphere of our winter days, are the first to cry out unreasoningly against the change. But from whence are our harvests to spring without the rain? What shall feed our failing springs and rivers if the clouds are to withhold their moisture continually? How is all the beauty and the wealth of production to be realized if storms are to be entirely discarded, and only sunshine prevai

The tendency of human nature is to find fault with the disagreeable, however necessary it may be to success and here in California, where disagree able days are the rare exception, instea of the rule, we put up with them less cheerfully and philosophically than do people of other sections. We come to feel that perpetual comfort is our birthright, and whatever interferes with it is out of place and unwelcome. The fact is, we do not look for long-continued storms in this climate A very rainy day is usually followed by weeks of sunshine and rapid growth. A week of continuous rain is of rare occurrence, yet so times it does come and brings with it inconvenience and discomfort. But there is one thing which we are apt to overlook; it does not necessitate suffering, as in other sections of the country from extreme cold, impassable snow drifts, frozen streams, and a general suspension of activity.

Of course we are all of us better pleased when our rains come, as in ordinary years, at pleasant intervals, in stead of, as now, being compressed into two or three continued storms with a heavy precipitation. Yet now we have no reason for com-plaint. We have had as delightful and cloudless winter as nature could afford. Unfailing sunshine has been the experience of almost every day. But with this perpetuated, the coming year would have been without its har bar to our unabated prosperity. We have now had sufficient rain to insure reasonably good crops, although the acreage planted will be smaller than if the rains had come earlier. It also insures us against a failure of our irrigating supplies, filling as it does our reservoirs, springs and rivers. A good year is before us, secured by a short period of disagreeable weather, and a somewhat lower temperature than is the rule with us. The unusually heavy snowfall upon the mountains, descending so much lower down than ordinarily, im-parts a little more chilliness to the winds blowing from that direction, which gives to the atmosphere a tone not quite in keeping with our ideas of semi-tropical warmth. But after all, what have we to complain of? This long rain is but a necessary means to a desired end. We should accept it cheerfully and thankfully, and wait patiently for the sunshine, which will soon return, and for the growth and beauty which the earth will put on at its com-There is only thing that we, and the

Just as soon as she has the authority to do so, Los Angeles should set about the work of remedying this crying evi'. Her streets should be so payed as to be passable in the most continued storm. Mud and mire should become obsolete in all her business thorough WM, HENRY SMITH, the head of the streets. We have become rich and prostected thoroughfares. With good pave ments, the disgust excited by prolonged storms would not be experienced. There storms would not be experienced. There would be no longer any cause for grum bling and discontent. We could get out of doors and go about our busines without inconvenience, if it did rain. The life and bustle of our busy streets ment bonds, and believes the people would not all at once be brought to a would give the necessary authority.

These successively rainy days emphasize our need in this direction. Let the want be supplied as speedily as possible.

One Certain Rule.

"The rain it raineth every day." Nothing happens in a more easy and natural way in Southern California than rain, when the conditions are general popular demand, trusting that the good to be done will more than counterbalance the evil and and observed and difficult as to bring on rain when the counterbalance the evil and and observed and difficult as to bring on rain when the counterbalance the evil and and observed and difficult as to bring on rain when the counterbalance the evil and an accounterbalance the evil and the counterbalance the evil properly set for it, and, by the same little awry. This country patly illustrates the character of the butcher's dog, of whom it was said that the butcher had to pull his ears off to get him to his meat and pull his tail of to get him away.

It is an increating though a trying study to note, during the prevalence of a really dry year, the repeated and apparently toilsome efforts put forth by nature to bring a rain. Time and time again the clouds gather in thick banks, and hover along the mountain by nature to bring the rain. Time and time again the clouds gather in thick banks, and hover along the mountain sides; the wind seems to be in the accepted direction; the barometer falls; there is perceptible moisture in the air, and these conditions obtain for perhaps hours of a day, or even days in succession, seeming only to await the word of command for a copious downpour. Then maybap a mighty wind from the north hurls itself against the cloud-banks, and they are driven off.

At the end of the cloth was some loose dynamite and at the extreme end of the bomb were found several dynamite caps. The bomb was about four-teen inches long and had strings attached to cach end. The detective explained that these were used for lewering the bomb from a wagon or other vehicle, so that it may be placed on the track without the necessity of the plotter getting out or even stopping his horse. The end of the bomb containing the cap and loose dynamite was intended to lay across the rail, and when the car passed over it the cap would explode and cause the loose dynamite to go off and ignite the sticks.

Impassable trails have prevented extended communication with the large ranches and the full extent of the losses is not yet known, but from the meager reports many old cattlemen estimate the losses fully at 50 per cent. It is nelleved that this will have the tendency of brighting up the immense hents of the corporations, and that the cattle interests will become sexregated and owned in smaller herds by lesser capitalists, who will have hetter facilities for withstanding severe seasons. Telegraphic news today from Fort Shaw, Fort Benton and Fort assinatoine shows a rising thermometer at 20 to 40 above and bright clear snow and light southeast winds, which portend milder weather. The snow is melting and definite news of stock losses during the most severe winter Montana has ever known will be soon obtainable.

[San Bernardino Index, Feb. 12.]

A reporter called at the residence of Mrs. Moore, on D street, between Second and Third streets, this morning, to inquire into the shooting of L. K. Burroughs at the house of Mr. Lewis, at Rock Springs, on the 1st inst. The gentleman, for everything goes to indicate that he is one, was found in a small room propped up in bed. He is in a terrible condition, having received six or eight buckshot in the face, carrying away almost the entire upper and a portion of the lower jaw, leaving the flesh riddled in a most horrible manner. The sufferer'is unable to utter a word, but he writes continually to those who stand around his bed. He is a man about 45 years of age, and came to this country about four years ago from North Carolina. From his writings, which indicate that he is a man of education, the reporter learned that he was stopping at the house of W. R. Standefer, about eighteen miles from Temedula. He had been there for some time, hunting and taking in the benefit of the climate for a severe attack of chronic rheumatism, and fields to hunt. He lived for many years in Austin, Tex., and was engaged in a number of the largest wholesale houses there as a salesman. The story of the shooting is best told by himself. He says he was at the house of Mr. Standefer on the afternoon of February 1st, when a gentleman named Lewis, living about a mile distant, came over and asked that he return home with him. Mr. Lewis had to be away from home that evening and for a day or so afterward, and as there was no one at his house but a Miss Reed and his daughter, 10 years of age, Mr. Burroughs was sin a rocking-chair near the window, the little girl standing at his right side. His left side was to the window. All at once there was a report from the outside, and the man fell to the foor wounded, as we have stated before. The window was broken into a thousand pieces, and the man fell to the foor wounded, as we have stated before. The wind wounds of Mr. Burroughs appeared at the time to be fatal. He was brought to this city by a gentleman named S. B. Tripp, and it was thought that he could not live twenty-four hours. Dr. Haslett was called in, and, through the most skillful work that it has ever been the writer's fortune to see, has brought the man to a position of safety. The physician was assisted in his operations by Dr. Bedford, the D street dentist, who used his instruments on the sufferer in the most effective manner. Dr. Haslett has been with the man night and day, and it can be said that never was there a case treated so perfectly and scientifically. To look at the man, even in his present condition, one would almost give him up as dead; yet the work of the doctor has been so skillful, and he has been so untiring in his efforts to save a life, that the patient has taken on new strength, and, without doubt, will get well. He says he can think of no reason on earth for any man placing him in this position. He has not an enemy that he knows of, and he can think of nothing else but that the man who shot him mistook him for someone else. He was evidently shot with his own gun, which he had left in a small room outside of the had left in a small room outside of the had left in a small room outside of the had left in a small room outside of the had left in a small room outside of the for any family shot with his own gun, which mistook him for some one else. He was evidently shot with his own gun, which he had left in a small room outside of the main building. In the morning the gun was gone, as was also a hunting-bag and a number of cartridges, loaded with buckshot and bird shot. The thing is a mystery all around, and may be traced down to something interesting for the public. Mr. Burroughs is known here by a number of gentlemen, who recommend him very highly. HAPPY HALL.

His Productive Gold Mine in the

col. Hall, who built 100 miles of the Southern Pacific Railroad under contract with that company. He was a very kind man to his men; a man of great force of character, and full of push and executive ability. He had very bad luck toward the close of his contract, and lost money, but he was not disheartened. Such men never are while health remains. Col. Hall was born alleader. He had all the magnetic influence, mixed with imperious force, which stamps a man as born to take the lead wherever he is thrown.

After leaving San Bernardino, he engaged in other enterprises, made money, and is today the proprietor of the richest gold mine in Southern California. It is situated about fifty miles east of. Victor, in the Dry Lake country. It was discovered by John Carr, now foreman of the mine, and was located by him, Hack Hurley and Mr. Gilman, of San Gorgonia. From them it was purchased by Col. Hall, who paid quite a snug sum for it, and with all his old fire, immediately undertook its development, with the iron energy and rushing push characteristic of the man.

He was, soon after buying, offered a and rushing push characteristic of the man.

He was, soon after buying, offered a large sum for the mine, but having plenty of means to develop it himself, he refused to part with a foot of it. And now, from what a very intelligent mining expert tells us, the probabilities are that in the Hall gold mine the gallant old veteran has a great fortune. A milling test of average ore on a large scale, returned $122 per ton.

Aside from the main mine, there are six other ledges located, from all of which rich ore is obtained; all well-defined and promising to the skilled eye. Thirty men and four mule teams left San Bernardino for the Hall mine on Saturday. Large quantities of supplies were taken out on the teams and more forwarded by rail to Victor, the starting point for the mine. Its operations are to be conducted on a large scale at this mine, necessitating a large consignment of supplies over the California Southern. It is a great pity that a way station is not established where the side-track on the Hermosa lands is now located. This would save a long and heavy transit from Victor up hill on the road to the mines. From the Hermosa side-track the teams could load up and head out down grade directly for the mine. No doubt a side-track will soon be established there. Abundance of wood and water surrounds the mine; access is easy and every desirable facility exists for economic work. About forty men are now employed on this great mine, with a number of fine mule teams.

On Sunday we met Col. Hall on the Barstow train. He looked as genial, as hale, as hearty, and wore the same determined air of habitual authority that he did twelve years ago, when controlling hundreds of men. He does not seem to have aged an hour since 1875. He was quietly enthusiastic about his fine mine and informed us that it was not for sale. He will devote all his energies, which are great, to the development of what is pronounced the richest mine in the lower country, and we heartily wish him success in his arduous enterprise.

All parties concerned in planting shrubbery, roses, etc., are specially requested to visit Leigh Overman's Nursery Depot, corner Temple and Fort streets, where they will find not only the largest variety of roses in Southern California, but as endless variety, of choicest shrubbery, clematis, etc., to select from.

THE RAILROADS.

TRAVEL TO BE LARGELY RE-SUMED TODAY.

Courate Statement of the Situation All Around—The Southern Pacific Rupning Trains—The California Southern Still in Trouble.

Everything is of a more roseate hue at last. The storm seems to be over for a fact, and broken travel resumes its somewhat limping course. At 2 p.m., yesterday, the Southern Pacific track between here and San Fernando was pronounced in shape for passenger trains to traverse with caution. At the same hour everything was reported o, k above San Fernando. passenger trains to traverse with caution. At the same hour everything was reported o. k. above San Fernando. The train which left here at 1:30 p.m. Monday started at 10:45 a.m. yesterday to proceed north from Lang. The lower Southern Pacific bridge in this city had been repaired by the pile-driver at 11 a.m. yesterday, and trains crossed it in lively procession. No. 20 (north-bound express) of Monday and Tuesday left here in one train at 5 p.m. yesterday for the North. Yesterday's No. 20 got in from the East at 7 p.m. and was sent out north on time. Two east-bound trains, the No. 19's of Tuesday and Wednesday, went out at noon. The delayed Raymond & Whitcomb excursion got in at 11 a.m. The Timsk has already published the alphabetic list. Heavy washouts were anticipated on the desert, and yesterday morning Assistant Superintendent Muir sent a train with ties out from Indio. The track was found all right, how-

The crew from the Santa Paula branch finally got into Newhall yesterday after-noon, and was at once put to work on the main line.

THE CALIFORNIA SOUTHERN.
The California Southern is still in the dumps. The wires were still down yester dumps. The wires were still down yester-day afternoon, and nothing could be learned of the situation, save that the delayed War-ner excursion was lying at Summit, at the north end of the Cajon pass, "well and happy." Nothing was known as to the whereabouts of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé excursion of 20 Pullmans. Trains will probably be got through today, how-ever, both from the East and from San Diego.

The Los Angeles and San Gabriel Valley, by hard work, got its breaks into fair shape last night, and expects to run trains regularly today.

Violet's Mardi Gras excursion to New Orleans went out yesterday with twenty-five neonle.

A mail from Arizona got in at 1:30 p.m.
It was the only one. Mails will probably come with a rush today from East and North.
The California Southern sent out a train to Colton at 5 p.m.
